Year, a new you, a new life and new ways to love.

Aloha LoveTribe,

Life is going so quickly I feel like I'm binge watching it unfold!

This last year many have stretched themselves to love, to be kind, all while grappling with anger and hate, their own and others. We have had acts of courageous love, some personal, like forgiving our mistakes and loving ourselves, some communal like Jodie of Code Pink, driving a truck load of supplies and love to the migrants at the border. All acts of courageous love lead to the flowering of virtue and ripple out, growing to huge waves.

These acts change our collective consciousness and as the Kabbalist concept, Tikkum Olam represents, they repair our world.

Which leads to this New Year, new beginnings, with new ways to love. Whether for you new seeds are still germinating, or have sprouted, individually and collectively new paths, new opportunities, new ways of living and loving are unfolding... right now.

Use your thoughts to consciously aim for what you want to manifest, for what you want to become (not overcome).

Whether your world has been changed by loss or gain, of a person or circumstance, a new chapter is beginning. And these new paths all offer new ways of holding life, of loving, of being love.

This coming year, all signs point to new beginnings and our abilities to hold them in good ways ... in new ways to love.

Happy New Year! xoxo Devi

My sister's bringing in de-light for us all this Solstice!

Our traditional solstice gathering at Edie's home (hosted by her, Patricia, Susan and Enid (not in photo) was called off due to Edies' just having gotten out of the hospital with pneumonia. Although it was the right thing to do, Edies' hearts desire was for this precious ceremony to still happen. The combination of letting go of the form and yet still open to the possibility, led to a last minute small group of women gathering. As we honored and held the light, by speaking the names of all the women usually there we brought them in. And we brought in the rest of our communities, our LoveTribes (you), our world. And we spoke our desires, like cupids arrows into our lives.

The trust to let go and yet still speak our hearts desires, allows us to light, explore, forge and discover ...
